

Henry Mosito

Sandstone recently lost one of its valued employees with the passing of Henry Mosito. Henry was a stalwart with our Afrikaner oxen and will be sorely missed.

Bianca van Rooyen, our Livestock Manager, sent us her thoughts on Henry.

"Henry was working in my division, Livestock.

In the beginning Henry was very sceptical for a woman being manager over livestock and he tested me more than once, but there grew a mutual respect and trust between us.

His knowledge with the Afrikaners was exceptional. I have learned so much from him and I think he took much more with him.

He always had a smile on his face, I still hear his laughter when one of the workers jumped away when they in-spanned the oxen. He just never understood why the people are so scared of the Afrikaners. He was also the best trainer for the oxen.

If you did not know Henry well you would never know when he's ill or aching, he just kept on working. With the fires experienced last year, he and all the livestock staff fought these fires right by my side and watching every body's back. We are one team and Henry has left a huge gap in our Livestock Division.

Not only will he be missed by us in his team and all at Sandstone but also by the Afrikaners."

After Henry Mosito's funeral we received the following mail from his family
