Stars of Sandstone Festival

South Africa's Sandstone Estates may be familiar to some, especially those with an interest in steam trains, but they also have an impressive collection of military vehicles in their collection, and for the forthcoming 'Stars of Sandstone Festival', which runs between the 4th and 12th May 2013, many of them will be on display and running around extensive estate.

The Sandstone Heritage Estate works closely with South Africa's Armour Museum to operate a collection of vehicles used in South Africa by their defence forces and its enemies between WW2 and the present day. The collection includes tanks, rocket launchers, armoured cars, artillery and soft skin vehicles, all in running order, a small selection of which is shown here.

With ample room to allow the impressive collection to be put through its paces in surroundings of outstanding beauty, the Trust opens its doors one a year for a nine-day festival, with visitors flocking to the event from around the world. Unfortunately attendance is limited so if you're interested book now!

4 - 12 MAY 2013

The Sandstone Heritage Trust works closely with South Africa's Armour Museum to operate a collection of vehicles used in South Africa by their defence forces and its enemies between WW11 and the present. The collection includes rocket launchers, tanks, armoured cars, artillery and soft skinned vehicles, all in running order.

Sandstone has ample room to put their outstanding collection through its paces in attractive surroundings. Once a year the Trust opens its doors with a nine day festival that features an impressive array of military hardware, agricultural equipment, vintage cars and a narrow gauge steam railway. Attendance is limited to ensure a quality experience for all participants.
